FOREWORD

IT is the sincere and earnest desire of the editor that this volume serve not merely as a record of the past year at George Washington, nor as an album to recall to those of us who will re-open it in years to come, the friendships and pleasures at the old school; but that it may serve a far more useful purpose of binding into a closer unity the varied interests of the scattered departments, so that it may play its small part in making George Washington a school proud of its location and name.

Respectfully Dedicated to one who has the arduous task of supervising student activities in the University, who bears his task to the end and who does it all with a smile; whose earnest endeavors have commanded for him the respect of all who know him—

DeWITT CLINTON CROISSANT

Professor of English and Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Activities.

DeWITT CLINTON CROISSANT, Ph. D.

DeWitt Clinton Croissant

Professor Croissant's extended college experience, both as a student and as an instructor, has made him well acquainted with the ways of students and their relations with the faculty, and his years at George Washington, figured by close relations with the student body, make him particularly well informed as to conditions here. That is why, as chairman of the Faculty Committee on Student Activities, he has succeeded in steering affairs to the satisfaction and gratification of all concerned.

Reward does not come without effort, and Professor Croissant's realization of the fact is seen in his college history. He entered George Washington University, then Columbian University, in 1895. After two years there, he went to Princeton, where he received his A. B. in 1899. From 1899 to 1901 he was a graduate student at the University of Chicago, and the next year he spent at the University of Colorado teaching English. In 1902 he was a Charles Scribner Fellow in English at Princeton, and the next year he studied at Munich, Germany. He returned to George Washington in 1905, and remained until 1910, serving for one year as Instructor of English and the other four years as Assistant Professor. After spending another year at Princeton as a graduate student he received his Ph. D., and then departed for the University of Kansas, where he spent four years, part of the time teaching English and part of the time directing the University's Extension Division.

He returned East in 1915 and devoted the whole winter to his hobby, simplified spelling, as General Field Agent of the Simplified Spelling Board, with offices in New York. But George Washington called him again, and he returned at the beginning of last year and took up his duties as Professor of English.

Let us hope the wanderings of Ulysses are over.

The stranger enters Washington through a magnificent gateway of marble and gold, and steps out upon the grand Union Station Plaza to get his first view of the Nation's great Capital. And what an impression!

AN APPRECIATION

THE city of Washington and its educational features offer George Washington University every opportunity to become the great national university that George Washington advocated and that James Monroe anticipated in the founding of our school.

"The College is * * * in immediate connection with a state of society where life is seen in its almost every possible phase, * * * where there appears not only every quickening influence to the mind, but where the moulding process may be conducted under all the advantages of a daily influence connected with the excellencies and defects of every class and character of public men, * * * where the teacher is not confined to his text and reference books, but may exhibit in almost every department the practical illustration and application of the studies pursued, * * * where social life in its different classes and the Legislature and the Judiciary of our Government are open for the improvement of the student, while under the guidance of his teachers, * * * where the most valuable Libraries and the richest collections from nature and art may aid his investigations."

Inaugural Address of
REV. JOSEPH GETCHELL BINNEY, D. D.
President of Columbian College, 1855-59

Here he gets his first vision of the majestic Capitol—the Heart of the Nation.
Battle-scarred it is, but all the more imposing because of it.

Across the grassy plots of the Capitol Grounds he gazes in wonder at the Library of Congress—rich in its architectural magnificence and bountiful in the knowledge available within.

The stately simplicity of the White House—the home of many great men—with its tall, imposing colonnades casts over him a feeling of awe and respect—

While the massiveness of the great edifice whence are directed the forces that are struggling for Liberty—the State, War and Navy Building—
inspires him with patriotic emotions—

And a realization of what the richest Treasury in the whole world holds, fills him with new hope for his country's future.

With a hurried glance down historic old Pennsylvania Avenue, the scene of many spectacles, both of joy and of sorrow—

He leaves these impressive places to seek rest beneath the weeping willows that border the boulevards of Potomac Park,—

And in Rock Creek Park, amidst the waters, trees, and rocks of God's big wilderness, opened to us by beautiful pathways and rustic foot-bridges.

And ever in view is the solemn shaft of the great Washington Monument—a fitting memorial to the one who made it all possible.

ADMINISTRATION

CHARLES HERBERT STOCKTON

Charles Herbert Stockton, LL. D.,
President of the University.

When President Stockton retires from office at the close of the present term there will go out to him from every member of the faculty, every student, and every friend of George Washington University, a feeling of deep regret—deep indeed, but softened by the appreciation and thanks of all for his careful and judicious guidance during his seven years of administration.

For those who know how much President Stockton has done for George Washington, words cannot express their feeling. His great purpose has been to place the University on a solid foundation of public confidence and to build it into a great school that is truly national—as a school in our position should be. From the very beginning of his term George Washington has risen in the confidence of the people, for he has so managed affairs as to deeply impress the fact that we are a self-sustaining institution.

The growth of George Washington in the public confidence is evidenced by the fact that the enrollment has nearly doubled since President Stockton took office; the prosperity is evidenced by the transference of the Department of Arts and Sciences in 1912 to a better site, and the acquisition of five new buildings since the transfer. The site which this department now occupies will, no doubt, be its permanent home, and it was largely through President Stockton's urgency that this site was selected.

President Stockton has always kept in close touch with the students, and delights in talking to them at school and fraternity functions. He is an authority on international law, and his lectures on this subject have been a foundation for many a successful career.

We will not bid our president farewell, for we are sure his discontinuance in office will not mean a cessation of personal relations.

WILLIAM MILLER COLLIER

William Miller Collier, A. M., LL. D.
President-Elect of the University

Dr. William Miller Collier, lecturer on Diplomacy in George Washington University, who becomes President this fall as the successor of Admiral Stockton, received his Bachelor's and Master's degrees at Hamilton College, and studied law at Columbia University. He has held highly important and responsible government positions, has had wide experience as a teacher and as a practicing lawyer, and is the author of a number of books.

He has served the national government as Minister to Spain, as Assistant Attorney General, and as Solicitor of the Department of Commerce and Labor; he has served the New York State government as county court clerk, referee in bankruptcy for the Northern District, and Civil Service Commissioner, being President of the Board of Commissioners for two years.

He has been an instructor of law in the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, the New York Law School, and George Washington University, and has practiced in Auburn, New York City, and elsewhere.

He has travelled extensively in Europe, South America, and Africa. He is well-known for his numerous writings on law, bankruptcy, diplomacy, and on economic questions.

Dr. Collier brings to the office of President a knowledge of the needs and problems of the University, gained through his long friendship with Admiral Stockton and through his relations with the students as an instructor.

ARTS AND SCIENCES

Department of Arts and Sciences

Howard L. Hodgkins, Dean

The Department of Arts and Sciences is the outgrowth of the original Columbian College, organized in 1821. It embodies the academic school, which has retained the name of Columbian College, the College of Engineering, the Teachers College, and the School of Graduate Studies.

Columbian College, the academic school, is a continuance of the original college, which was solely academic. After other departments were added and the school assumed the name of Columbian University, the two names, Columbian College and Columbian University, became so confusing that the name of the academic department was changed in 1903 to the College of Arts and Sciences. The name Columbian College was readopted in 1912, however, the name of the University having been changed in 1904 to the George Washington University.

The College of Engineering was established as a part of the University in 1884, under the name of the Corcoran Scientific School, which name it retained until 1904, when the present one was adopted. It provides courses in civil, mechanical, and electrical engineering, and in architecture and chemistry.

The Teachers College became a part of the University in 1907, after a successful experiment of three years' duration, in which a number of teachers in the Washington public schools were admitted free to a course in teaching. It provides a number of courses, so that the student may specialize in the branch he prefers.

The School of Graduate Studies confers in course the degrees of Master of Arts (A. M.), Master of Science (M. S.), Civil Engineer (C. E.), Electrical Engineer (E. E.), Mechanical Engineer (M. E.), and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph. D.).

Columbian College

Columbian College, the second Baptist college in America, was founded by Luther Rice in 1821, for "the sole and exclusive purpose of educating youth in the English learned and foreign languages, the liberal arts, sciences and literatures." The freedom of the old charter has been perpetuated that "persons of every religious denomination shall be capable of being elected trustees, nor shall any person either as President, tutor or pupil be refused admittance into said college or denied any of the privileges, immunities, or advantages thereof for or on account of his sentiments in matters of religion." The College became non-denominational in 1904.

DEAN WILBUR

Washington itself is the key to Columbian College. Its work is done in the American atmosphere of the National Capital. George Washington's ideal of an institution that should standardize the thinking of America was not to be realized, but the effect of American atmosphere on Columbian College is vital and distinctive. Columbian College does its work in an atmosphere most distinctly American.

It is our heritage and it is also our opportunity and our mission. The American scholar interpreted by Emerson, not as a thinking machine, but as a man thinking, is still the ideal of Columbian College in the American Capital.

William Allen Wilbur

College of Engineering

Engineering work was instituted in the George Washington University in 1884 when the Corcoran Scientific School was organized, and has been continued with increasing efficiency since that time.

DEAN HODGKINS

The College of Engineering now conducts courses in Civil, Electrical, Mechanical and Chemical Engineering, and also in Architecture and General Chemistry. In number of students enrolled it is the second department of the University. Its diploma is accepted by all branches of the government that require an engineering degree for entrance into government service. For admission as a candidate for a degree it requires fifteen High School units, and for graduation it requires one hundred and forty semester hours of work. This is the standard graduation requirement in engineering schools of the first rank, and exceeds by twenty units the requirement for the Bachelor of Arts degree.

The Faculty of Engineering has always insisted that the courses for a degree should include both general cultural studies and technical studies; that the engineer should be a man of breadth and culture as well as a man with technical knowledge. It has aimed to give to its students that thorough grounding in mathematics and sciences that is a necessity if engineering studies are to be properly treated, and if the graduate is to continue to grow in his profession and is to be able to develop as engineering develops. The records made by its graduates, the positions they hold, the responsibilities that have been placed on them, the successes they have attained, are all evidences of the thoroughness of their college courses and of the fine caliber of the men who have been students here.

A. B. Hodgkins

Teachers College

DEAN RUEDIGER

Teachers College is one of the younger children in the family of Colleges of George Washington University. It was organized as a Division of Education in 1907, and so has only just entered upon its second decade of service. As Teachers College it has been serving only since 1909.

That Teachers College lays stress upon a rounded group of courses in educational theory and practice may be taken for granted. These courses are now very generally accepted as essential for enlightened and effective instruction and few desirable positions are open to those who have not pursued them. While this is as it should be, sight should not be lost of the fact that the heart of the teacher's preparations is found, not in pedagogical theory, but in a thoroughgoing knowledge of subject-matter. It is this, and not the former, that confers upon the teacher the voice of authority. In harmony with this fact, Teachers College prescribes academic specialization and adheres to the A. B. degree. This degree is the standard symbol of liberal culture and so is most appropriate for the college-trained teacher. The pedagogical training is recognized by means of a Bachelor Diploma in Education.

U. C. Ruediger

School of Graduate Studies

The School of Graduate Studies is the Research Department of the University. It was established in 1892. To become a candidate for any one of the degrees offered by its faculty, the applicant must already possess a baccalaureate degree in arts or science, or the equivalent of such a degree.

DEAN MUNROE

The requirements for the winning of the Doctor of Philosophy degree are especially exacting. The thesis required must be an original contribution to knowledge and must be accompanied by an exhaustive bibliography. An unique requirement is that after the thesis has been favorably passed upon by the professor in charge of the candidate's major topic and by a co-referee appointed from the Faculty, and accepted by the Faculty, the candidate is required to successfully defend his thesis at a public disputation before a Board of Experts not connected with the University in an official capacity. Thirty-two such Doctorate Disputations have thus far been held and they have brought together on the boards many of the most distinguished scholars of this and foreign countries, advantage having been taken of the fact that men of this character are frequently attached to the diplomatic corps in Washington.

At the Disputation held last May ten candidates were presented, of whom nine secured the degree sought. Any person in the audience may take part in a disputation. Not infrequently experts from the government departments and elsewhere have appeared in the audience and taken part in the disputation. The theses are published and sent to the leading universities of the world. One such, just received, published by the Smithsonian Institution, contains 461 pages with 424 illustrations in the text and 161 appended plates. This is more extended than usual, but all the theses are works of magnitude.

LAW

Law School

DEAN FERSON

This Law School, the oldest in the District of Columbia, was established in 1865, and in the course of its existence has done much for the advancement of legal education. It has been our endeavor to furnish careful instruction to students who are prepared to receive it, and to advance students no more rapidly than is compatible with thoroughness. The Law School is a charter member of the Association of American Law Schools, and has always stood for the highest and most progressive standards in legal education.

It should be noted that there are at present enrolled in the school twenty women, who seem to be pursuing their study with as much success as the men. This Law School, owing to its situation, is called upon to render more than a local service. Among the registrants of last year there were students from forty-three states, Hawaii, Philippine Islands, Porto Rico, China, Cuba, Holland, Persia and Turkey.

Both faculty and student body have contributed to the forces now engaged in the defense of our country. There are one hundred of our last year students now in army and navy service, and many of them are holding positions of rank and large responsibility.

M. L. Ferson

MEDICINE AND DENTISTRY

UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL

NURSES
HOME

Medical School

DEAN BORDEN

The Medical School of George Washington University is one of the oldest in the United States, it being the seventeenth in the order of establishment. By maintaining high standards during its many years of existence, the school has attained a position of which George Washington can well be proud.

It is designated as a "Class A" institution by the Association of American Medical Colleges, of which it is a member, and it is accredited for all its work by the Combined (Royal) Medical Examining Boards in England. The degree of M. D. given admits the holder to all government examinations, including those for the Medical Corps of the Army and Navy and the Public Health Service.

The school is most favorably located for the study of medicine. The students have access to all the wonderful libraries and museums in Washington, including the library of the office of the Surgeon General of the United States Army, which is the most complete medical library in the world; the Library of Congress, the Army Medical Museum, the Naval Museum of Hygiene, and the National Museum, three of the best medical museums known.

The high standard of the school is evidenced by the position of the graduates and the confidence placed in the school by the medical profession. Before the war ten per cent of the total number of the regular Medical Corps of the United States Army were graduates of this school. Now many more, both graduates and undergraduates, have gone into the service. A large number of the undergraduates have enlisted in the Medical Reserve Corps of the Army and have been granted leave to continue their studies here.

W. H. Borden

Training School for Nurses

The George Washington University Training School for Nurses, maintained in connection with the University Hospital, was opened February 28, 1903, its purpose being to give young women thorough instruction in nursing.

About one hundred and fifty have graduated and gone out to take their places in the world. Some are across the seas, some in the camps, some in institutional positions, but the greater number are in private nursing.

"For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." These two guiding principles, if applied by every nurse in her own life, will solve many of the perplexing problems that beset the young nurse. The nursing body will be lifted to a higher level only as the life of the individual nurse is improved and only as she brings herself into conformity with these great laws of human welfare.

Our profession cannot remain secular. If it attempts to do so, it becomes a trade, and a low one. What do I mean by the spirit of religion in the nurse? I mean the missionary, not the proselyting spirit, but the spirit of service—the sense of working for a cause that is absolutely and infinitely worth while, in which we can spend ourselves without stint, without restraint, without reserve. It is its own reward, and the more of it you give, the richer you become. Wherever there is the greatest need of all, there is my home, and paradise can offer no greater blessings. It is the soldier's creed; it is the creed of the devotee the whole world over, and it must be our creed if we are to face the facts, the plain every-day facts of our work. Most of us as nurses do not realize that we are dealing with human life, and not with human bodies alone.

It is with these high ideals and aims that the Training School for Nurses carries on its work.

Mary W. Glascock

Dental School

In regard to the future of the Dental School of the University I would say that all possible encouragement should be given the dental students who are endeavoring to obtain their education through conscientious study in the afternoon classes.

DEAN WALTON

Most of the students are of mature age and some are married; the majority of them are obliged to defray their own expenses. My contact with them has shown me that they are earnest, hard-workers, who, in order to get this special training, are obliged to refrain from much social activity and amusement for the three or four years they spend in the course. Their time is so occupied that they become estranged from outside affairs. They are governed by the highest aim in life—to be professionally a benefit to humanity. Why, then, should they not be offered every facility and advantage during their afternoons of study?

My thirty years as an instructor qualify me to state that graduates from this school have always gained favorable recognition from the profession, as teachers in dental schools, as members of dental examining boards, and as practicing dentists. If such students as these—ambitious and self-supporting—are given broader opportunities, the world will have more capable men.

The past has proved that the future of this department of the University cannot fail to be bright, and with the aid of my capable and hard-working faculty, it will continue in its successful path.

VETERINARY MEDICINE

College of Veterinary Medicine

Veterinary medicine, as is shown by its bibliography, has made greater progress in the last twenty-five years than any other profession, and now offers a fine opportunity to young men inclined either to life in the open, in general practice, in research work, or as a municipal, state, or national government veterinarian.

DEAN BUCKINGHAM

The College of Veterinary Medicine aims to graduate its students fully equipped to fill any of these positions with honor and ability. The first five veterinarians sent to France with our Expeditionary Forces were graduates of this school, class of 1917.

The Veterinary Corps of the U. S. Army has been expanded, and now contains 1,500 officers and an enlisted personnel of many thousands to care for the animals and to inspect the meat and milk supplies of the Army.

In some states there is a great lack of veterinarians and fine practices are awaiting young men qualified to handle them. The vast amount of capital invested in our animals, the rapid increase in population, and the foreign demand for all kinds of food enhance the usefulness of the veterinarian. At no time in the history of the country has there been a more opportune time to enter this profession and succeed.

Records show that the George Washington veterinarians have shared well in the general advance and prosperity of agriculture.

David E. Buckingham V.M.D.

PHARMACY

National College of Pharmacy

The National College of Pharmacy was organized in 1872 from the Columbian Pharmaceutical Association, and associated with the George Washington University in 1906. Like the other departments of the University, it has always maintained the highest standard of education in the courses it embraces.

DEAN KALUSOWSKI

The number of graduates is always far below the demand, and the demand increases steadily. This steady increase and the particular requests of not only Washington druggists, but those of many other cities as well, indicate the pharmacists' confidence in the thoroughness of the course of study fixed by the College, and the results it brings about.

Up until this year the enrollment of the College has increased rapidly, and at the beginning of the present term things looked more favorable than ever. Since the beginning of the term, however, many of the men from all classes have gone into the service of the country—many of them in the hospital units, where they are giving Uncle Sam the benefit of what they have learned while at this school.

With the tremendous increase in the pharmacy business and the unusual increase in the population of Washington, the National College of Pharmacy will be forced to take on a much larger responsibility. It will assume this responsibility faithfully, and the effect will be such as to attract much wider attention to the work that is being done at George Washington University.

H.E. Kalusowski.

Baccalaureate Sermon

Class History

Four years ago a jolly rollicking crowd of high school graduates entered Columbian College. Of course some of them were sober and sedate, and did not have to pass through that reconstruction stage which the rest were forced to undergo. We have all come at last to be "staid old seniors," ready to be "lost now in the wide, wide world."

We have had some mighty good times in these four years. As a beginning the Sophomores announced that they would not "rush" the greenest Freshmen the college had ever known, so the Freshman-Sophomore Rush was duly called off. After our class elections, however, the men were given a gay time for a few minutes.

Notice the senior class officers as another example of our audacity. Precedent and public opinion both say, "The president must be a man," and yet—well, look at the list of officers.

Our good times here have been numerous, our sad times few, except at the end of January and May, when we were forced against our will to study the concomitant dissipation of matter which changes from an indefinite, incoherent, homogeneity to differentials, integrals, neurines and categorical syllogisms, until our poor brains could stand no more.

We are certain that no better or brighter class ever came to the wonderful end where we all shall receive little rolls of sheepskin.

We bid farewell to old George Washington with regret. Some of us can't stay away and will return next year to begin work for M. A.'s and M. S.'s.

Class History

It was late in September of the year 1914, and the good ship College of Engineering was on the verge of sailing when its Skipper suddenly discovered that he was short-handed, due to the "honorable discharges" handed out on arrival at port the previous June. After but few minutes deliberation, however, he nipped the end off of a perfectly good Havana (as any ordinary recruiting officer would do), picked up his Waterman, drew out the extension leaf of his desk, planked down some blank forms, and announced that the muster roll was again opened for additions to his crew. All of which explains how we came to sign up for this memorable voyage through the seas of University life.

It was not long after we weighed anchor, however, that our troubles began. Challenged to a hand-to-hand combat by the Class of '17, we gathered together one night, organized, elected our leaders, and sallied forth to meet the haughty Sophomores. But they displayed remarkable generalship, for when we arrived at the scene of the proposed battle not a Soph was to be seen.

After this everything moved along smoothly during the first and second laps of our journey, the latter being marked only by some strenuous efforts to revive intercollegiate athletics. It was, therefore, with unalloyed joy that we received the announcement that George Washington University would again be represented on the gridiron by a team in 1916, the first time since 1910. And a remarkably successful football season it was, and but served as a fitting beginning to our more active participation in intercollegiate athletics.

And just as we were setting the stage for still greater athletic achievement, President Wilson decided that the United States had reached the limit of endurance of Hun barbarism, and formally declared war on Germany. This caused the abolishment of our intercollegiate athletics, and led us to agree with General Sherman's definition of war.

The last lap of our voyage was marked by two big events. The first was the considerable increase in size of our class by the formal transfer of all chemistry students from Columbian College to the College of Engineering. The second, and most important, was the announcement of the resignation of our President, Admiral Charles H. Stockton. When we recall the rapid growth which we have seen the University make under his guidance, we appreciate what a real loss our Alma Mater sustains in his leaving. But we extend to his successor, Dr. William M. Collier, our most sincere wishes for the success of his plans for a greater George Washington University.

Class History

Now we come to the end of our undergraduate days and pause to look back on the last four years that comprise the history of our college life.

Following that memorable August, 1914, when the first guns of the great war echoed across the Atlantic, our class came into existence. We have seen the hordes bring devastation over Europe and insult upon America, until we too have been forced to join in the fight for liberty and democracy.

To record our petty experiences when such momentous things are occurring seems futile and absurd, but we are glad of the consciousness that our brief history is linked with the greatest period of all history. Our class has contributed two of its few men, Mr. Nasby and Mr. Guilford, and they are now "over there" where history is being made fast.

Washington is the center of all the nation's war activities, and it acts as a lodestone that draws to itself people from every class and every walk of life—the rich and poor, the great and small, foreigners and Americans. Into this "melting pot" the members of our class were drawn. We are distinctly cosmopolitan and diversified in our interests. Some of us are specializing in science, history, literature, elementary, high school, and college teaching, and some in music, art, and gymnasium.

Our class activities have been managed by a set of active and capable officers, and the whole class has taken a real live interest in affairs.

We feel that the inspiration gained through our relations with the faculty and with one another, together with the knowledge acquired by hours of conscientious study, is a foundation for prosperity upon which we shall build and grow.

Class History

When the members of the Class of 1918 receive their long-coveted diplomas conferring upon them the degree of LL. B., they will have attained an objective which even in normal times is reached with great difficulty.

As has been the case with many classes entering the Law School, the Class of 1918 started with a large enrollment. The way has been hard, the road has been long, the task has been difficult, and our membership has been greatly depleted, but those of us who have reached the goal may look back with some feeling of pride upon this achievement. The class has not only lost from its membership the usual quota who fall by the wayside during the three long years of study, but also those who have heeded their country's call and have gone forth to help make the world safe for Democracy.

These are times that try men's souls. The unsettled conditions resulting from the great conflict which is now raging have affected every walk of life. The war has torn men from their peaceful pursuits, and the Class of 1918 has not been left unscathed. It would be futile in these few lines to attempt to eulogize those members of this class who have sacrificed personal ambitions to follow the flag. They have turned aside from the arduous task of acquiring a legal education and are now engaged in testing their abilities on the field of battle. Their deeds will live forever and their names will be recorded on the roll of honor of this institution.

But those of us who have remained behind and whom fortune has permitted to complete our legal studies have a stupendous task before us. The great social and economic upheaval which is now in progress and which will increase in magnitude when strife has ceased, will present a problem which will tax to the utmost the abilities of the present generation. As it has been in the past, so will it be in the future, the legal profession must form the vanguard of society in building on the ashes of the past a new civilization. When peace once more reigns and the vast armies disband and return to their abodes, need will be felt as never before for men learned in the law to assist mankind in adjusting itself to the new order of things.

We of the Class of 1918 are entering upon our career at a time which presents such opportunities to serve our country and fellow men. Justice will be the power which will reign supreme throughout the world, and it is upon us as members of the legal profession that the burden of administering justice must fall. It is for us who go forth from this school to uphold the best traditions of the legal profession and this University. It is a task worthy of any man. May we so meet it as to reflect honor upon ourselves, our school, and our profession.

Six-thirty and all is well, and in blows Kidder. He and Hall then converse about the case the "prof" is on, the bell rings and class is over. Kidder tries to disguise himself as chief of police by wearing all kinds of funny badges. This may be done to intimidate the "profs," but you can draw your own conclusion.

ROY WILLIAM LARSEN

MINNESOTA

Φ K Σ; Φ Δ Φ

A. B., 1913, University of Minnesota

Another "Beau Brummel" in the class of 1918. Larsen has many good qualities and one of them is that he has never been known to answer "not prepared" when called upon to state a case. We know his industry will win for him in the courts of justice.

CHARLES A. LIND

MINNESOTA

Lind came here from Valparaiso University, realizing, no doubt, that he could learn more here. We don't see much of him, for he has to hurry home in the evenings after classes.

ALFRED BRISCOE LINDSAY

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

A. B., 1913, George Washington University

Lindsay got his A. B. at Columbian College and continued right on in the Law School. He has been with us quite a long time and has made many friends; his departure will really be felt.

Law Seniors

DAVID LORENZ

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Φ A

One of the shining stars in the firm of "Lorenz & Rhoads." "Dave" is a quiet, industrious sort of fellow, whose greatest dissipation is his terpsichorean activity, in which he excels. He is well known by his schoolmates as a "good scout."

WALTER JOSEPH MADDEN

SOUTH DAKOTA

Φ K Σ; Φ Δ Φ

Columbian Debating Society

Walter's only regret is that he does not know more of the fair sex in this town; we are sure if the fair sex knew of his yearning he would not long want company. It is probably due to his loneliness that Walter applies himself so industriously to his studies. We wonder what he will do with himself in the evenings after he graduates.

RHESA MILES NORRIS

PENNSYLVANIA

Δ T Δ; Φ Δ Φ

President Student Council '17; Legal Aid Society

"Rhese" is always mixing around trying to see how he can help the school out. He has done his share in student activities and more too. Perhaps he spends a little too much time with the "gentle ones," but he enjoys it, so why not? He's now sporting the uniform of chief petty officer.

ARTHUR SEYMOUR PARKER

NEW YORK

Γ Σ

We don't know whether he's a good student or not, but he certainly looks like one. If he gets by in the future as well as he does in Moot Court, he will be a great success.

WILLIAM HORACE PARMELEE

PENNSYLVANIA

K A

Here's another one who can do many things well, of which "fussing" and getting good marks are not the least. He's always there with the helping hand, provided that he is not already occupied, which is usually the case.

Law School

MAX RHOADE VIRGINIA Φ A

Alternate, Catholic University Debate '16; Hatchet Reporter '17; Dept. Editor Cherry Tree '17; President Menorah Society '16, '17; Press Representative Columbian Debating Society '16, '17; Secretary Walter Clark Law Club '17; Asst. Law Librarian '17

Max soon lets you know that he is a lawyer, journalist, orator, philosopher, and admirer of Kerensky, and last, but not least, that he has a "press card" admitting him to all public buildings in the District. He is anywhere and everywhere; he has even been seen wandering about the halls of Columbia and C. U.

DANIEL L. RICHEY KANSAS

We can't say much about Richey, for we have said so many nice things that we have just about exhausted our store. Everything we have said, however, well applies to him, for he combines all sorts of good qualities. He is a home man, and has two good reasons for it.

EDGAR CUMMINGS SANBORN NEW HAMPSHIRE Φ Δ Φ

Sanborn is the last hope of the "prof" when everyone else is out of cases; we have never known him to fail in a pinch yet. He has "made good" in Moot Court, and we feel sure that he will be equally successful in the courts of justice.

DONALD D'ARCY SHEPARD DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA Σ X; Φ Δ Φ

Editor '18; Marshal '18; Hatchet Reporter '18; Legal Aid Society; Columbian Debating Society; Press Representative '18

"Shep" is a genius and a diplomat; he can read Weikert's writing and get by with it, which proves he is a genius, and he can arrange for trips to Bermuda just when exams are due, which proves he is a diplomat. He can be seen most any time surrounded by a group of breathless listeners eagerly drinking in some tale about his celebrated trip.

CLIFFORD FONTAINE STONE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Legal Aid Society; Columbian Debating Society

The right honorable Clifford Stone, sometimes termed "pep." He enjoys climbing all the "profs" except "Van," who seems to have his number, and occasionally calls on him for the decision of a case before he has time to read the facts. "Pep" will make good if he doesn't use too much of his far-famed sarcasm on the judges.

Law Seniors

HAROLD CARRIER THORNE MARYLAND

"I don't read any of the cases, but I take full and comprehensive notes." Thus spake the great Thorne. Thorne delights in keeping the "profs" up in the air by constantly flitting in and out during lecture. He has gained great fame in Moot Court as senior member of the firm of "Thorne & Hensel."

GERALD VERNELL WEIKERT DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA Σ X; Φ Δ Φ

Secretary '16; Vice-President '18; Phi Delta Phi Prize '16; Alternate, University of Pittsburg Debate '16; Dept. Editor Cherry Tree '18; Legal Aid Society; Walter Clark Law Club; Treasurer Columbian Debating Society '16, '17; Vice-President '18.

A glance at the above list of activities proves that "Jerry on the Job" is not an inappropriate appellation. If there is any work to be done, he is the man for the job; you can't give him too much, for he can usually find someone else to do it. If Weikert is as successful in practice as he has been in school he will surely win distinction in his profession.

FREDERICK VERNE ARBER ILLINOIS Σ X; Φ Δ Φ

A. B., 1914, University of Illinois; Legal Aid Soc. This sun-kissed youth, the pride of Peoria, is a humorist, philosopher, expert tobacco-chewer, conqueror of hearts, admirer of Chipperfield, and possibly the greatest politician ever turned out by that metropolis of the Middle West.

ANDREW JACKSON BANKS OHIO

This man of dignity left us in February to enter the profession. If his record at school is to be taken as a criterion his success is assured. We hope to meet him "out there" in the future.

HALSEY WARREN BARDWELL VERMONT

Ph. B., 1910, Ewing College. Bardwell is one of our new students and is so quiet we find it hard to get acquainted with him. We are glad to have him with us, although it is only for a short time.

Law Seniors

MAURICE BASKIN

MASSACHUSETTS

A. B., 1911, Harvard University

Maurice is studying to be a patent attorney, and no doubt he will make a good one. The only thing that we are afraid of is that he is just a little bit too serious.

ERNEST R. CHAMBERLAIN

KANSAS

A. B., 1916, George Washington University; Legal Aid Society

Ernest was anxious to get to France, so he wound up his affairs in February and sailed away. It will be like old times to see him "over there."

LOUIS MALVERN DENIT

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Legal Aid Society; Columbian Debating Society; Secretary '17

Denit has a habit of smoking cigars so large that we think he is trying to hide behind them, but that will never be necessary as long as he and Hall are together. There is one thing that Denit can do better than any other, and that is to tell the judge just what a bright fellow he is and get away with it.

GLENN ROBERT EUDALEY

KENTUCKY

President '16; Columbian Debating Society

If you haven't been supporting student activities as you should you have probably been approached by Glenn and asked why. He is an ardent believer in student activities and justly believes that everyone else should be.

SAMUEL JOHN FLICKINGER

NEW JERSEY

K A

No, freshman, that's not the dean; that's only "Flick." Speaking of camouflage, "Flick" has it, for of all the things to make a fellow look wise and dignified, that cable attached to those "specks" of his is the best. We will never forget when "Flick" in all his glory opened the first "sission" of the court and called for everyone's "attintion."

LUTHER H. HEIST

PENNSYLVANIA

Σ N

Heist is another one of those who graduated in February and jumped into Uncle Sam's army. He is short and snappy, and if he makes things hum in the army like he did here we will hear no more complaints about inefficiency.

Law Seniors

FREDERICK WILLIAM HENSEL MINNESOTA

Hensel gained great fame as a member of the firm of "Thorne & Hensel." He has a vein of quiet humor which is evidenced at all times except when the opposing counsel is cross-examining him. Sometimes Hensel brings his evidence to court in the form of a piece of paper, and when he can't get away with it it makes him peevish.

JAMES ELWYN LOGGINS TENNESSEE K A

Loggins has never been known to be quiet through a whole lecture since he started school, a result of his love for rough-house and argument. He is a genius in his way, and we are sure that if he devoted his efforts to more serious things in life than kiddish frolics he would be a shining star in the legal heaven.

CHARLES ORR MARSHALL NEBRASKA

Phi Delta Phi Prize '15; John Byrne Prize '16; Legal Aid Society; Columbian Debating Society

Charles is the prize-winner of the class. If there's anything we don't know we go to him for it, for we are sure to get an intelligent answer. Unless something terrible happens his success in life is assured.

HENRY BASCOM MORROW TENNESSEE

Morrow knows so much more than the rest of us that he grabbed his degree in October and skipped out. Of course we regret his loss so early in the year, but, then, we don't like to have anyone slip anything over on us like that.

JAMES WALLACE NICHOL MICHIGAN

A quiet, industrious student whom everyone likes. Perhaps you have noticed the fatherly smile that adorns his countenance lately. There's a reason.

JOHN A. OSOINACH MISSISSIPPI Σ X President '15

Osoinach hails from Mississippi, but we have got him figured out, and like him very much. He has had a good reason since last summer for thinking about other things besides law.

Law Seniors

RUTH CAMPBELL OSOINACH

MISSISSIPPI

Mrs. Osoinach has been able to keep right up with her husband, having started in school with him in 1914, and stuck right to it until graduation. There must be something fascinating for her in the study of law.

WALLACE A. ROBERTSON

INDIANA

Wallace is a big, tall, husky chap from Indianapolis. If the place has the effect on everyone that it has on him, it would be well for us to open up offices in the Indiana metropolis.

EDWARD CURTIS TAYLOR

MASSACHUSETTS

Φ B E

Secretary '17; Legal Aid Society; Walter Clark Law Club

Dean Fraser has said that Taylor can't think as does a "reasonable man." Moot Court shows that he can tell a wild fable and consistently assert it to be the truth. Pictures are such a give-away that Taylor has feared to present his.

LAURA ELLEN VOLSTEAD

MINNESOTA

Φ Δ Δ

Our other "Portia." Everyone refers to Laura as a "regular guy." She has a level head and a pleasant personality, and we foresee success for her in her chosen profession, especially if the judges with whom she comes in contact are at all susceptible.

ROBERT CLEMENT WATSON

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

C. E., 1913, Lehigh University

Robert seems to be rather undecided. He got a B. S. in C. E. at Lehigh and then decided he wanted to study law at G. W. He is a noted wrestler. Maybe he thought his skill could be employed on some of the "greasers" when he went to the Mexican border last year.

RICHARD FRANCIS WOOD

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Σ X; Φ Δ Φ

C. E., 1915, Lehigh University; Legal Aid Society

Dick is probably our most carefree and nonchalant student. Neither "prof." nor case, nor exam can disturb him or upset his poise and calm good nature. Dick is a soldier boy, and expects to put his legal knowledge to good use in helping to revise and reform the laws of Germany.

Class History

It was on the 29th of September, 1914, that our Alma Mater blew the horn for the ninetieth time, summoning those who dared to profane the memory of Hippocrates by pretending to get into the ranks of the medical world.

Twenty-five new faces answered the call, ready to submit themselves to the tedious and elaborate tests. Where did they come from? A careful observer, after a short time, would have been compelled to remember the wilds of the West, the immortal "Dixie Land," the eternal "Yankee Doodle," the myths of old Ireland, and the enchantment of tropical life. They constituted the first class with one year of college work.

Without loss of time the class assembled for the purpose of selecting the man who was to lead us through the turmoils of the first year. Very wisely, John H. Lyons was chosen our first president.

The battle was on; and the history of our first recitations reads like a paraphrasis of a chapter from the Genesis. "At the beginning, all was chaotic, and knowledge amounted to nothing, but out of this nothing a strong competent class was created." As time passed by it did not seem as though we had met each other only a few months before, but rather as though we were the members of a large family. The end of the year found the great majority of the class highly satisfied.

The fall of 1915 brought us together again, this time only twenty-one strong. There was something new within the class, and this was the Davis-Quinlan alliance. The work in this year was undoubtedly more difficult than that in the year before; yet nothing could stop our progress except the summer vacation.

When we assembled for the third time, fourteen voices answered "present" to the roll call. It was then that we received our representative from the fair sex. This year gave us our first taste of real medicine.

When reveille sounded for the fourth time we were thirteen strong, and so we stand, armed and ready for the final campaign. We must await June to know the outcome of this strenuous series of battles, but we have hope.

"Bitts" is one of those fellows who does many things well. We would call "Sammie" a model young man except that once in a great while he will swear and occasionally smoke a cigarette or sneak around the corner and enjoy a "High Ball!"

TOMAS MOREU CAJIGAS

PORTO RICO

Secretary '17; Editor '18

This micro-organism, also known as the Gus bacillus, was discovered by Ruiz in 1914. It is a slow-growing, sluggishly motile, rod-shaped bacillus. It is frequently found in laboratories, but rarely in dance halls. It was conclusively shown that this germ was the cause of at least six cases of "Columbiancollegegirlsstudyinghistology."

JACK ANTHONY CONNOR

Many-sided, mercurial, versatile, is Jack. He has a great aptitude for Kelly Pool, Craps, and the latest Terpsichorean. Since Washington went dry Jack comes to class on time, and with a clearer "bean." However, it isn't everyone who can flutter and grind with equal success.

An idiopathic introversion product characterized by abnormal adiposity, hypertrichosis, ideas of grandeur and nursophilia. The two chief complaints of this affection are typically brought out after exposure to draft, and consist of reflexes and interstitial keratitis.

JOHN HUGH LYONS DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA Φ Χ

President '15, '18; Editor '15; Student Council '17;
Winner of Ordoneaux Prize '16.

Synonyms: Jack, Slowboy.

Definition: A chronic affliction of the Senior Class.

History and Geographical Distribution: Has been known for 27 years—by us for 4 years. Originated in D. C. Occurs sporadically in Bar Harbor, Me.

Pathology and Symptoms: Emaciation, hypertrichosis, frequent class presidency, and characteristic cheerful disposition.

Prognosis: Excellent.

Treatment: Treats frequently. Is especially amenable to the dansant.

LYLE MILLAN MASON VIRGINIA Α Κ Κ

Vice-President '18

Originated in Virginia. Is not a troublesome affection. Manifests itself by characteristic cheerful disposition and alopecia capitis. The prognosis is good; and the treatment is rest in bed.

GEORGE HENRY RAWSON MASSACHUSETTS

Exemplifier of the syndrome of Rawsonism, characterized by sputtering speech, professorphilia, purposeless movements, sporadic internship, and Hippocratic countenance. Often manifests a late appearance. The condition is chronic and there is no known cure.

RAMON CLODOMIRO NAZARIO RUIZ PORTO RICO

Treasurer '17; Secretary '18; Phar. D., Porto Rico, 1914

A tropical disease, discovered by Dr. Acker in the wards of Children's Hospital. Frequently manifested by nurses at parties and dances. Characterized by peculiar speech, characteristic gait, and unusual sayings; examples: "I am sick!" "I tell you ze sing!"

Medical Seniors

HERBERT HERMANN SCHOENFELD

A rare condition, reported at Children's Hospital by Hartley. Occasionally manifests itself at clinics. Rarely seen in lectures. Chief manifestation is interrupting sleep in lectures by peculiar cry, "Oh, Doctor!"

KATHERINE WRIGHT

MARYLAND

X Ω

A cute, contagious, febrile individual, characterized by late appearance and frequently associated with Rawson.

Complications: Mr. Wright; no sequelae.
Diagnosis: Easy; made on chronic tardiness.

Prognosis: Graduation.

Treatment: Prevent profanity in immediate neighborhood.

CECIL CLAIR DAVIS

NEW MEXICO

Φ X; Π K Λ

Vice-President '17

A virulent poison, indigenous in Sherman's Pool and Bowling Parlor, but occasionally found in lecture rooms and the University Hospital. Manifests itself chiefly in bowling matches and pool games. Causes "riles" and loss of spending money. Antidote: Mrs. C. C. Davis.

IN THE OPERATING ROOM

It was a wee little baby, only a year old, but it was a pretty baby. You could see that as the inhaling mask was lifted from time to time for more ether; and perhaps that was why the fellows stopped passing notes and whispering, and moved up forward in their seats so they could see better. We watched every little step in the operation, and we saw almost as quickly as the assistant that the babe had stopped breathing. We almost stopped breathing too, and the tick of the clock and the rustle in the arena, as they lifted the little body whose spark of life had almost ceased to glow, were the only sounds. How intensely we watched every movement as they worked to bring back the glow and fan it to a flame. See, wasn't that a breath? No—yes—surely it was—yes—yes, baby is breathing again, and see—its face looks better.

Now the surgeon smiles. How gladly we saw that, and we all took a deep breath and smiled too, and some made the motion of a silent applause, and some closed their eyes and said a prayer of thanks—one did, anyhow. It seemed as though The Great Physician had been for a moment in our midst.

Class History

Three years ago each one of us had a vision of a wonderful profession to be obtained, so to G. W. U. H. we came.

The thought of some day being a real nurse, wearing a white uniform, and creating a feeling of awe among those who don't know us, spurred us on to take this step, and we have not regretted it.

There have been many "ups and downs," and times when we thought we couldn't find the courage to proceed, but through it all we have come—victorious? Yes.

Many mistakes have we made, but we have corrected them to the best of our ability, and we shall let each one be a stepping stone to perfection.

Our class has produced what has heretofore been impossible—"dry-eyed" supervisors for M. and F.

Firm and lasting friendships have been made, and in the years to come, we will be glad for the sweet memories associated with our relationship to the George Washington University Hospital Training School.

SALLIE GRACE LAKE

VIRGINIA

There are many wild rumors about the future of Grace, but we believe she will soon sail for France, as her "Prince Charming" is patiently waiting there for her and her song.

HILDA KEPLINGER McKEE

By necessity a nurse, is Lucy, for she maintains a dignity characteristic of a nurse alone. She has a habit of supposing "you know" all things, but nevertheless we think she knows a few herself.

Class History

Three years ago there assembled at George Washington a bunch of straggling, unsophisticated people, coming from all parts of the country and bringing all kinds of ideas, who well deserved the name of freshmen. They soon grouped themselves together and before many days had passed they were an organization, with all the officers, and the unity and harmony that go with it.

They had struck a hard thing and they realized it. They began to forget the things they had been enjoying so much and learned to work. They saw the position of the college student and adjusted themselves accordingly. As time passed they began to enjoy the work and became so interested in it that they skipped through the first year in no time. The visions of being great dentists came early.

The first year closed with our ambitions aroused and our spirits high, so we went off joyfully on our summer vacations. After our return at the beginning of the second year it did not take us long to adjust ourselves, although things were changed considerably by the absence of some of our former friends and by the arrival of a number of new faces. This year proceeded much as the latter half of the year before, although our work became harder and we grew up as the days went by.

When we returned last fall to see the last year through we were much delighted to see so many of the old faces again, including some of last year's seniors who remained to finish up more thoroughly. Early in the winter the size of the class was enlarged by an influx of students from New Jersey, and we gladly welcomed them into our midst.

And now we are through. We have learned much and are ready to take it out with us into the wide world, where we all expect to make names for ourselves and bring fame to George Washington as well.

Historian '18

Eugene has a wonderful young voice, which he puts to two uses—singing and putting his patients to sleep. A bright future awaits him in dentistry.

JOSEPH EVANS ARBEELY

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"Joe" tries hard to get dentistry into his "bean," but he takes everything else so easy that we were surprised when we found he really could work.

EUGENIA BUTKIEWICZ

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mrs. Butkiewicz started right out to show that a woman is just as good as a man, and we must admit that we are convinced.

Class History

Three years ago an untutored mob signed up to study or make a bluff at studying this subject. This same unruly bunch proceeded to run amuck through the halls of the College. In their ravings one could see the love of plowed fields, wild antics developed in high school and that broadness of intellect resulting from prep school experience.

But such actions were tolerated for only a brief period, for one day a distinguished upper classman called them together, told them they were a class and proceeded to conduct an election. "Steve" Hughes was elected president. The first year was a quiet one for that mob, for it did not take them long to learn that the professors knew more than they did. As the years passed by some of our members fell by the wayside and others enlisted in the Army or Navy.

By the beginning of the second year the class was able to conduct its own elections, and "Steve" Hughes again was elected president.

The senior year saw a great decrease in our ranks; out of a class of twenty-two only eight remained to graduate. Martin Schwartz was elected president this year, and ably steered us to the goal.

And now the class of 1918, once raw material, has become after successive distillations a finished product. Those of us who go forth from George Washington in June will not be spoken of as just "another graduating class," but as "That class of 1918," which has shown its professors that it was with them, body and soul.

Class History

At last we have come to the "end of a perfect day" when all good friends must part, and one which has been looked forward to by all of us with great interest for four long years. Let us look back over the years and see what they have meant.

We numbered twenty-five in the fall of 1914, when the class started on its career, and started the foundation for our careers as well. With some of the twenty-five it was the beginning of the end. As happens in all ventures, some lost the initial enthusiasm and dropped out; the end of the first year found sixteen still paying tuition. One of the features which stands out prominently in our memory is the cheerful atmosphere during this year of Buckingham Hall, the Palace of Anatomical Science.

The second year showed a complete metamorphosis—a transformation from a heterogeneous mass of humanity to a homogeneous group worthy of the name "Class of 1918." This was the real beginning of the struggle for existence, fourteen answering to the roll call (when the roll book could be found). Most of our time was divided in analyzing a white flocculent precipitate and determining the fate of a ham sandwich and a glass of milk.

Again our numbers were reduced, leaving but twelve to continue in the junior year. This year two elective courses were introduced—High Finance and Parliamentary Law—both of which proved so interesting that they threatened to deflect us from the established curriculum. "Goin' to eat, Cy?"

This brought us to that period where the effects of the present war were directly felt in the loss of two of our members, Johnson joining the Navy and Haas being called with the Coast Artillery Corps. The vacant chairs were filled, however, by a newcomer and an old friend, Ocantas and Lawych, respectively. A great deal of work has been done on parasites, resulting in the discovery of the intermediate host and methods of extermination of a widely known parasite, commonly termed the "road louse."

This year marks the completion of the struggle for existence by the Class of 1918, which we hope will terminate in the migration of its members. We hope, too, that all may be permitted to "go over the top" with the same esprit de corps that has been maintained throughout the course of study.

THE SEASON

As was done in most American colleges, athletics were stopped at George Washington last fall because of the country's entrance into the war. Basketball, however, was restored after the students pledged $350 to cover any possible deficit.

Manager Allen secured a schedule of eleven games and the team joined the District Intercollegiate League, of which it became the champion after holding first place all season.

Lieutenant Bertram Groesbeck, U. S. N., captain of the 1917 team, offered his services as coach and succeeded in whipping the team into fine shape when his military duties called him away. He was succeeded by Le Roy S. Murphy, formerly of the New York University, whose success has been shown by the numerous victories under him.

All the games on Manager Allen's schedule were played with the exception of the game with Mount St. Mary's. The team journeyed out to Emmitsburg, but a snowstorm prevented the train from reaching its destination. Of the ten games played, five were won and five were lost.

CHARLES RISDON ALLEN

Law '19

The ball was larger than "Charlie" when he began playing on the Nemos team in 1907-08. He continued playing independent basketball until 1909, when he became captain of the Y. M. C. A. squad. First appeared on the varsity squad in 1915, and has been playing on it ever since. Manager 1917-18.

CHARLES M. BOTELER

C. C. '21

"Charlie" hails from the wilds of southwest Washington. Played on the Washington Eastern High School squad, 1915-16, 1916-17; captain of the same 1916-17; Phi Mu Sigma League of the District, 1916-17; G. W. U. squad 1917-18. Realized his youthful ambition by helping the Buff and Blue win the District League championship in his freshman year.

LEONARD ERDAHL

CAPTAIN

C. C. '18

From Blue Earth, Minnesota. His arrival in Washington was their loss and our gain. "Len" played forward on the Waldorf College team for three seasons, 1910-13, and on the Olaf College squad for two, 1914-16. George Washington, too, has been fortunate enough to have him for two years, 1916-18.

VICTOR LYMAN KEBLER

C. C. '18

"Vic" first blinked in the morning sunshine away back in the late '90s, and first came to public notice playing basketball with the Oakmont Athletic Club. Later he played in the District Sunday School League and one season in the Akron (Ohio) City League. He first appeared with the G. W. U. squad in 1916-17, and became a varsity player in 1917-18.

ALLEN HUNT ROBERTS

C. C. '21

Allen was wafted in on the wing of early morn from Alexandria. He played with Friends' School, 1915-16, 1916-17, and then came down to George Washington to help lick the other teams in the District League.

EUGENE UNDERWOOD, JR.

C. C. '19

"Gene" is from Chicago. He has experimented in basketball at sundry times and places during his youth. This was his first year out at G. W., but he made the varsity, and we are glad of it.

ROSS ANTHONY WHITE

Eng. '21

Ross played on the Washington Central High School team, 1915-16, 1916-17, and helped win the high school championship last year. He fits in fine at center, and never is very far from the ball. Another example of freshman "pep."

CHARLES RALPH WITT

Dent. '19

Witt displays great ability in shooting baskets. He comes from Indiana, where he played on the South Bend High School squad, 1912-13, and on the Y. M. C. A. team 1914-15. He deserted his native State to give G. W. the benefit of his championship skill.

CHARLES D. R. HALSTEAD

Dent. '19

Halstead played on a Jersey High School team from 1911 to 1914. Made the Penn Freshman squad and the Wesleyan varsity. Played with New Jersey Dental College, 1916-17, and then came to George Washington, where he landed a place immediately upon his arrival.

UMHAU (Manager) GARDNER (Coach)

The girls' basketball season opened with a fine schedule of twelve games with the best schools in the vicinity of Washington. A large number of girls reported for the first call and continued to show up for practice during the entire year. As war conditions began to grip Washington more firmly, it was soon seen that it would be necessary to change the plans made for the season, switching from the intercollegiate schedule previously arranged to an inter-class and inter-sorority schedule.

The season began with a girls' track meet at the Y. M. C. A. on January 5, held for the purpose of raising funds to defray the gymnasium expenses. The large crowd that attended enjoyed a basketball game between Pi Beta Phi and Chi Omega, dashes, high jump, relays, obstacle race, basketball throw for distance, etc., and paid in enough money at the gate to secure a good floor for practice and the home games.

The gym of the Calvary Methodist Church was obtained and became the scene of the many interesting contests between the University girls. A basketball supper was held at the Women's University Club rooms each night before practice and all of the girls ate and went to practice in a bunch, which put them in fine spirit for play. The suppers were fixed by a different committee of girls each evening and served promptly at 7 o'clock, so that the girls could get to the gym in time.

Nearly all the games this season have been in the way of practice games, teams being picked from the different classes and from the different sororities. The frequent practices and the small number of games played with outside teams gave every girl who came out an opportunity to play a great deal. As a result, the attendance at practice was always large and the spirit and enthusiasm were very keen.

The older girls were very gratified with the showing the large number of freshmen made. An unusually large number came out for the team this year, and a number of the best players were freshmen. If basketball can continue to exist next year in the face of the conditions that seem probable, the season will start with unusually good material, which should furnish the nucleus for one of the strongest girls' teams in this part of the country. Those interested regret that girls' basketball could not have been carried further this year than it was, but they are already looking forward to next year, for which internal conditions seem unusually bright.

BOYS' TENNIS

The men's singles tennis championship tournament of G. W. U. was held last fall. In spite of the absence of the hitherto leading players of the University, who were almost all engaged in some form of war work, the tournament was characterized by close, hard-fought contests, few defaults and general good-sportsmanship; and notwithstanding interruptions by the weather, the tournament was brought to a successful close three days ahead of schedule. The entry list consisted of twenty-five names from Columbian College, Engineering College, Medical School, Graduate School, and Law School, thus being truly representative of the University.

The four men to reach the semi-final round were Eugene Underwood, William Ballinger and Edward Salant, of Columbian College, and Eugene English, of Engineering College. Ballinger and Underwood met, and much to the surprise of the knowing ones, Ballinger was returned winner, 6-4, 6-1. In the other match English lost to Salant, 6-3, 6-4. The final, between Ballinger and Salant, was a struggle between net play and backcourt work, with the decision to the net. Ballinger took the first set, 7-5; Salant won the next three, 6-1, 8-6, 6-1, and with them the championship.

GIRLS' TENNIS

The Girls' Tennis Team was picked from the winners of the tournament held last fall. Since the date of the tournament, however, some of the members of the team have left the University and many new girls who are interested in tennis have entered. Another tournament is scheduled for the spring and a complete reorganization will probably result. The manager is negotiating with some of the girls' schools in the District in an effort to arrange for a number of matches.

The absence of so many of the University's men throws upon the girls much of the responsibility of keeping alive the school spirit. Great interest has been shown in the girls' matches and the good material on hand encourages our hopes for a successful season.

Graduate Manager of Activities

The Graduate Manager of Activities is appointed by the President to act as treasurer for all student activities, including athletics, publications, dramatics, and social affairs.

Elmer Kayser, of the Graduate School, has passed four years at George Washington, during which time he has been very active. His continuous participation in student activities makes him an excellent man for the position.

The Faculty Committee on Student Activities was instituted by the President's Council in the spring of the year 1915 for the purpose of directing, controlling, and accounting for all actions entered upon by individual students or groups of students whereby the name of the University or any of its departments is used or implied.

The Committee consists of one member from each department of the University, all appointed by the President, who also designates the Chairman and Secretary. It has full control of, and responsibility for, all student activities in the school; it sees that the activities are properly conducted, becomingly carried out, and that financial obligations are provided for and met.

No student activity is allowed in the University unless approved by the Committee, and should any student or group of students engage in an activity without the consent of the Committee, or conduct an activity in an improper manner, or fail to meet pecuniary obligations, the Committee investigates the matter and reports to the President, who has authority to discontinue the activity and to withhold credits or to suspend or expel the students involved.

This method of managing student activities is one which is in practice in many schools in America, and it has proved very successful.

Student Council

The Student Council was organized in June, 1916, as a result of the adoption of a set of resolutions by the student body in a mass meeting held at the Law School a month before. These resolutions, drawn up by Dean Fraser, provided for the creation of a body to supervise and encourage the revived student activities of the University.

At its first meeting Rhesa M. Norris was elected Chairman, and Elmer L. Kayser Secretary-Treasurer. The first official act of the Student Council was the organization of the men and women of the University for participation in the great Preparedness Parade of June 14, 1916. The student body has seldom responded as whole-heartedly as it did to this first appeal of its representatives.

The new school year saw the reinstatement of a full athletic program. Under the supervision of a board of editors, the first Student Handbook was published. A spectacular tug-of-war between Fresh and Soph was conducted, and a voluntary tax, subscribed to by over a thousand students, was raised to furnish financial backing for activities. This first Council, which included such members as Miss "Ted" Seibold, Bertram Groesbeck, "Bill" Stayton and "Johnnie" Bixler, supported by Dean Fraser and his Committee on Student Activities, put G. W. U. back on the activities map.

The second Council, elected in April, 1917, selected "Bill" Hance as its President, and retained Kayser as its Secretary-Treasurer. Vail Minick was made Vice-President. Soon after its organization the Council experienced some difficulty in the control of publications. This matter, however, was soon adjusted and the Council settled down to the difficult task of keeping a school alive during war time. Through the co-operation of Professor Croissant, basketball was brought back and a guarantee fund was raised for its support. Another class rush was staged in Potomac Park, a second Handbook was issued, and steps were taken toward the elimination of the athletic deficit. Hance, the President, found it necessary to resign on joining the colors and was succeeded by "Al" Biggs. A month later Kayser resigned as Secretary-Treasurer, and left the Council to become Graduate Manager of Activities. Earl Van Wagoner succeeded him.

The Council, with a new membership and with problems of polity settled, has set its face toward the elimination of the athletic deficit and the building up of more ties to bind the student body together in a day of storm and stress.

George Washington Players

One of the most successful of the College activities is the George Washington University Players. In 1916 they won a reputation for artistic work by producing Louis N. Parker's "Disreali" in a fashion which brought forth favorable comment from both the students of the University and the people of Washington. The next year, in Augustin Daly's "A Night Off," they brought the entire student body together in a jolly reunion, and more firmly established their renown as the best amateur players in the locality.

This year's production was Ernest Denny's "All-of-a-Sudden-Peggy," a delightful three-act comedy. Miss Ada Howell was the inimitable Peggy, Mr. Cameron Burton the dashing young hero, Miss Phebe Gates the distinguished matron, and Mr. Clarence Freark the ridiculous Lord Crackenthorpe. Mr. Philip Crissman as Uncle Archie was an amusing bald-headed character, and Miss Polly Voorhees was very natural in her part of Millicent, the young sister of Jimmy. Miss Rachel Benfer was the sprightly Mrs. O'Mara, and Mr. George Nordlinger, as Jack Menzies, was the wealthy friend of Jimmy. Miss Eleanor Stanton, in her role of Mrs. Colquhoun was a true gossip; Mr. George English and Mr. Oscar Styron both showed natural ability as butlers. "All-of-a-Sudden-Peggy" was such a success that the players were urged to reproduce it in the spring, but the unfavorable conditions prevented it.

The George Washington Players are entirely in the hands of the students. Even the director, Mr. Eugene Underwood, and the business manager, Mr. Karl Stecher, are students.

Even with such a past the Players are not looking back, but forward to the time when they will succeed in having established at the University a Chair of Playwriting and a little theater of their own. Then the students will see plays which they themselves have written, staged, managed, and acted. This is the ambition of the organization, and it is for such a future that the Players are working and will continue to work until it has become a reality.

Debate

Although conditions in George Washington University are not as favorable as might be wished for the carrying on of debating, it is with pride and satisfaction that we look back on the achievements of the past few seasons. In the school year of 1914-15 no intercollegiate debates were held; membership in the debating societies dwindled, and debating as a college activity appeared to be dead. In the autumn of 1915, however, the faculty appointed as Debating Coach, Professor Ernst Otto Schreiber, Jr., under whose inspiration and guidance a revival finally came, and in the shape of four successive forensic victories.

In the fall of 1915 George Washington's team, composed of Morehouse and Jacobson, lost to the University of North Carolina, and in March, 1916, Kidder, Carter and Keats lost to the University of Pittsburgh. In May, 1916, however, the wheel of fortune took the upward turn, and the G. W. team, composed of Cornell, Fuller and Morehouse, defeated the Catholic University of America in a hard-fought forensic battle. On December 18, 1916, Kidder and Hall defeated North Carolina; on April 5, 1917, Kemp, Smith and Taylor were successful against Washington and Jefferson College; and on April 12, 1917, the debating season was brought to a successful close by a team composed of Kemp, Brock and Wilkins, defeating the University of Pittsburgh. It was not possible to arrange any intercollegiate debates in the fall of 1917, but three were scheduled for the spring of 1918.

GILBERT L. HALL
Coach

The Debating Council, composed of the debating coach, two faculty members appointed by the President of the University, the president of the Delta Sigma Rho chapter, and a delegate from the Columbian Debating Society, attends to all the business details of the intercollegiate contests, and these details are legion. Not all the work connected with an intercollegiate debate is the spectacular stage stuff; behind the scenes is somebody who has done perhaps more work than anyone else to make the contest a success, whose work is known to few, and who must take the satisfaction of duty well done as his only reward. If the coming debates are the success that is hoped for them, the major part of the credit will be due to the untiring and uncompensated efforts of Mr. Gilbert L. Hall, who combines the functions of Debating Coach, Columbian Debating Society delegate, and Executive Secretary of the Debating Council.

Columbian Debating Society

The Columbian Debating Society is an organization made up of students from all the departments of George Washington University who are interested in debating. While most of the members of this Society are registered in the Law School, it is strictly inter-departmental and is open to all students of the University.

The Society was officially recognized in the fall of 1889 and has been continually in existence since that date. Among the founders of the Society are Walter C. Clephane and John Paul Earnest, who are Professors in the Law School.

While the primary purpose of this Society is to carry on formal debating, it also forms the means by which the students may obtain practical and efficient exercise in the development and expression of their thoughts before an audience. By attending the meetings of this organization students will gain a knowledge of parliamentary law and procedure; extemporaneous speaking is developed by the free discussions that take place.

This year has been a novel one in the history of the Society, in that five young ladies, members of the First Year Class, have joined and taken active part in its proceedings. It is practically the first time in the existence of this organization that women have spoken from the platform. To Miss Grace M. Eddy belongs the honor of being the first woman ever to address the Society in formal debate. The first woman to win an "honor" in the Society was Miss Harriet M. Barbour.

The Society has had a very prosperous year, and many new members have been added to its roll. The annual banquet was held during the month of February.

Davis Prize Speaking

The Davis Prizes were founded in Columbian College by Hon. Isaac Davis, of Massachusetts, in 1847. The original endowment was five hundred dollars, "proceeds of which will afford three premiums, in cash or gold medals, of the value of five dollars, of ten dollars, and of fifteen dollars annually—these premiums or prizes to be distributed annually to such members of the Senior Class as shall have made the greatest progress in elocution since their connection with the College."

These orations are first read separately by each member of the Committee of Award and are marked for quality of composition. They are afterward marked by each member of the Committee for effectiveness in delivery. Composition and delivery are given equal weight in the award. After the contest the Committee in conference determines upon the award of the prizes and this award is announced at the close of the exercises.

Engineering Society

To serve as a forum of engineering students for the discussion of engineering topics, and to offer to the students the opportunity of hearing talks by practicing engineers, is the purpose of the George Washington University Engineering Society.

Striving to save and interrupt as little as possible the valuable evening periods, and to make it easy as well as profitable for the employed engineering students to attend, the Society has held its meetings this year according to a new plan.

Immediately after the last late afternoon class, at 6:40 p. m., on the second Monday of each month, the engineers are served with a free supper, cafeteria style, by a group of girls, headed by Miss Martha McGrew, Miss Ruth Bennett, and the Sphinx Honor Society. Thus satisfied, the engineers are ready for their meeting, which usually ends early enough to allow an evening's work of drawing or experiment. This plan has been made possible only by the kindness and hard work of the girls who serve the supper.

The year was opened by the October meeting, at which Dean Hodgkins, Professors E. V. Dunstan, R. B. Morse, J. R. Lapham, T. B. Brown, and several students talked on the aims of the Society.

At the subsequent meetings a wide range of engineering topics were discussed by both students and outside engineers. The following talks were given by outsiders: "U. S. National Army Cantonments," by Capt. L. S. Doten; "Reinforced Concrete Construction," by H. D. Appleby, of the Bureau of Yards and Docks; "Safety First," by W. C. Wagner, of the Bureau of Standards; "Electric Elevators," by V. H. Winnemore, of the A. B. See Elevator Company; "Cream Separators," by Prof. W. D. Halsey; "Asphalt," by Roy M. Law, chief chemist of the U. S. Asphalt Refining Company; and "Concrete," by J. J. Earley, a Washington contractor. Among the talks by students were the following: "Pattern Making and Foundry Work," by J. H. Wilson; "How to Study," by J. Lenovitz; "Testing of Road-Making Materials," by Raymond Harsch; "Furnace Hearths," by J. D. Spalding, and "Radio-Telegraphy," by J. B. Brady.

On account of the war fewer trips than usual were taken, but the annual trip to the Bureau of Standards was made in the spring.

Architectural Club

In spite of the unfavorable conditions due to the war, the Architectural Club has held its own among the organizations of the University during the past year. Like all of these it has given up many of its members to the service of Uncle Sam, and it presents with pride its honor roll of active members now in military or naval service:

L. K. ASHFORD—Reserve Officer.	M. B. CRIST—Naval Reserve.
J. E. BOYER—Reserve Officer.	E. JETTMAR—National Army.
F. A. CALKIN—Reserve Officer.	E. G. SCHARF—National Army.
J. J. CAREY—Marines.	C. A. SMITH—Aviation.
J. H. CHAPMAN—Field Clerk.	W. W. TAYLOR—Aviation.

In addition to these mention should be made of the following, who have joined the forces of the nation's workers:

H. F. ALMON	B. H. HARRIS
H. Y. BRADLEY	J. H. LAPISH
W. T. CONBOYE	H. F. LEE
G. A. DAIDY	E. G. LIPPITT
T. R. EDWARDS	E. H. PENNEBAKER
R. K. GALBRAITH	T. J. ROWLAND
R. R. GAUGER	H. D. SCOTT
H. GRAHAM	W. L. SIEBEL
A. L. HARRIS	D. H. SMITH
	A. P. STARR

Among these are two members of the faculty to whom the University granted leave for this year.

While these circumstances have reduced the membership and prevented in a measure the usual activities of the organization, still the spirit of the Club remains undaunted. A few new members have been welcomed; meetings have been held as usual, and an interesting talk has been presented at each one. In no way has the Club failed in the fulfillment of its purpose. The feeling of the entire Club has been to put the country's need foremost and devote all energy toward "doing our bit."

The Club closes the scholastic year with the hope that next year will see normal conditions restored with the members reunited more firmly than ever.

The Chemical Society of the George Washington University is an organization whose active membership is composed of students who are pursuing or have pursued a course in chemistry at the University. The objects of the Society are primarily to promote interest in chemistry among the students of the University, and to disseminate up-to-date knowledge on chemical subjects of general interest, among its members. This year its purposes have broadened so that it now supplements the courses of instruction in chemistry by giving individual assistance to students through the discussion of subjects of particular interest to them. Such individual assistance can be made very helpful to the students and certainly should be continued as part of the work of the Society in the future.

The feature of the regular monthly meetings is an address or paper delivered by an invited speaker or by one of the students. Since it is desirable to have the students take part as much as possible, few outside speakers have been secured this year; the majority of the lectures and papers, therefore, have been given by students. Dr. Munroe, the honorary president of the Society, gives the opening and closing addresses each year. The following papers and addresses were delivered by students during the year: "Coal-tar and Its Products," by W. A. Gersdorff; "The Manufacture of Alcohol," by P. J. Valaer; "Antiseptics," by W. S. Brown; "Explosives," by J. L. Young; and "The Chemistry of Photography," by W. A. Gersdorff.

Because of the unusual circumstances this year the Society could not make many trips of inspection to the various industrial plants around Washington. For instance, one of the most interesting trips, which the Society made every year with a very good attendance, could not be taken this year on account of the "dry" law.

Legal Aid Society

The Legal Aid Society, founded four years ago by Professor Everett Fraser, is an organization composed of second and third year students of the Law School. The members are selected by the Executive Committee of the organization after nomination by the faculty, the nomination being made on the basis of scholarship.

The Society's purpose is twofold. First, it gives legal advice and assistance gratuitously to those persons who apply for it and who appear to be worthy and unable financially to secure it otherwise. Second, it serves as a laboratory to introduce the student to the practical side of the legal profession.

The Society maintains an office in the Law School, which is open and in charge of a member every evening except Sundays and University holidays, from eight until ten o'clock.

It is the function of the student members under the guidance of the faculty members, to render advice to clients, and when necessary or advisable, to introduce and conduct cases in the Municipal Court. Graduate associate members are assigned to look after cases presented to or carried into the higher courts.

The relations existing between the Legal Aid Society, the courts of the District, and the District Bar have been exceedingly fortunate. The members of the bar have been ever ready to assist the student struggling with the mysteries of court procedure.

During the present school year the membership has been greatly lessened by withdrawals due to the war, but the Society is continuing its good work in spite of this.

Students' Black Club

The Students' Black Club is a branch of the District Black Club, which in turn is one of a large number of Clubs all over the country, named in honor of the late Dr. Greene Vardiman Black, commonly known among the dental profession as "the father of modern dentistry."

The purpose of all these Black Clubs is to study and to promote the methods of dental surgery which Dr. Black formulated by devotion of much time and labor to investigation and research. After years of study Dr. Black combined the ideas and experiments of other dentists with his own, establishing methods which have been associated with his name ever since.

The local organization is composed of a few of the best dentists in the city who follow Black's methods and who spend part of their time in the study and promotion of them.

The Students' Black Club was organized in 1917 by Dr. P. V. Gallagher, a member of the District Club, in order to interest the students in the methods and to offer them further study outside of school, the methods being entirely different from those taught at the University. The members of the students' organization are picked from the members of the senior class after recommendations as to competent work and live interest in dental surgery.

The Club meets every Tuesday night at the office of Dr. Carl J. Mess in the Champlain Apartment. Dr. Mess is the instructor and demonstrator. He practices sometimes on the students, the members of the Club, or on the patients of the Club members. After the students have become familiar with the methods they too are allowed to use them upon their patients, always under the eyes of the instructor.

The students who have the opportunity of gaining further information in dentistry during their school days have an advantage upon those who must learn through experience in later years, so there is a real reward that comes with membership in the Students' Black Club.

The Women's University Club, which is open to all women students in the University, has a membership this year of over a hundred.

The Club has attractive rooms at 2027 G Street, where business meetings are held each month, and where the women can pass their spare time while at school. A special entertainment program follows each meeting, and luncheons are served every day.

The annual Mixer, to which all University students are invited, was held during the Christmas season in the Assembly Hall of the Arts and Sciences Department, and was well attended. The feature of the Mixer was an address by Lieut. Toulmin-Kothe, of the British Embassy. Refreshments and dancing followed.

The Columbian Women of George Washington University is an organization composed of alumnae, students, and wives of the faculty, trustees, and officers. It was organized in 1894 for the purpose of advancing the interests of women, and of the University.

This year has been a progressive and an interesting one for the Columbian Women, for fifty-four new members have been added to the organization. An addition of a thousand dollars to the Nellie Maynard Knapp Scholarship Fund by Judge Martin A. Knapp was gratefully received.

Meetings have been held monthly at the Women's University Club rooms. A social half-hour, during which a number of members have acted as hostesses, has preceded each business meeting, and a most enjoyable program has been presented at each one. During this year the organization has had the privilege of hearing several officers of the allied armies speak on the war. These gentlemen were: Lieut. W. Dayard Toulmin-Rothe, of the British General Army Staff, now stationed in Washington; Capt. R. R. Glen, of the British Army, now honorary attaché detailed to Washington; and Lieut. Froument, of the French High Commission. Other speakers were Mr. Charles J. Brand, Chief of the U. S. Bureau of Markets and Supplies, and Mrs. Jane A. Delano, chairman of the National Committee on Red Cross Nursing. Two of the Columbian Women have also been on the program—Miss Ethelwyn Hall, who gave reminiscences of the Columbian Women, and Elsie Sanders, who spoke on the war gardens at Bryn Mawr.

An annual dinner is one of the big events held by the Columbian Women. Last spring a reception was given during Commencement Week to the women graduates of the University.

During the session of 1908-09 the Veterinary Medical Association of George Washington University was organized in the Veterinary Department for the promotion of a closer relationship between the students and the profession, and it is a real live wire in the Department. The privileges of membership are extended to the Faculty and Alumni of the College as honorary members, and to the student body as active members.

In the course of the session leading members of the profession and honorary members are frequently heard. Each active member is given an opportunity to demonstrate his proclivities as a lecturer on any subject connected with Veterinary Medicine which he cares to elect. Naturally, he must defend his remarks against any discussion or criticism made by those in the audience after the presentation. Self-confidence, clear thinking, pointed answers, and level-headedness are developed through such procedure. By the time graduation is at hand each member has had several turns, and while he may not be a polished speaker, he is not the raw recruit he otherwise would be, were these faculties left uncultivated.

The meetings are held monthly. No class distinction is present, and Seniors, Juniors, Sophomores, and Freshmen meet on common ground, working one and all for the organization. It serves as the medium whereby closer co-operation is secured, and where the members of the different classes may come to know each other more intimately. It is the organization through which the student body can speak and be represented.

Its code is the advancement of all things worth while. The services which it may render are gladly offered to the needs of the country whenever the call may come, and while a goodly number of the Honorary Members are now in the service of the United States, the present members stand ready to do their share. As in the past, George Washington University holds a place of highest regard in the ambitions and realizations of the organization.

The Menorah Society of George Washington University, established November 26, 1915, is a constituent of the Intercollegiate Menorah Society, which was founded at Harvard University in 1908 "for the study and promotion of Jewish culture and ideals." Its object is to supplement the courses in the Hebrew language in the colleges where it is taught, and to make it known where the course is not provided.

Each constituent of the Intercollegiate Association is assisted through the furnishing of libraries and lectures and in countless other ways. The meetings of the local Society are held each month and interesting lectures and discussions are heard.

The Society is open to all students of the University, regardless of race or creed. A hearty welcome awaits you.

Interest in things Spanish, and especially in acquiring fluency in Spanish conversation, resulted in the organization by students of the Spanish classes, of La Sociedad Espanola last fall. Active membership is open to all students registered in the University, while members of the faculty and former students may become associate members. Meetings are held twice a month on Friday nights, Spanish conversation being insisted upon as far as possible.

Among the guests of the Club this year have been: Teodoro R. Yangco, Commissioner from the Philippines; Messrs. Manuel Lomelin and Cayetano Serrano, of the Mexican Embassy, and Capo Rodriguez, of the Carnegie Institute.

Much of the success of the Club has been due to the efforts of Mr. Doyle of the faculty, who together with Mr. Jones and Mr. John constitute the Faculty Advisory Council.

Interfraternity Association

The interfraternalism which has developed among the various fraternities in American colleges in recent years is nowhere more strongly manifested than at George Washington. Common interests and a desire to advance the scholastic, athletic and social activities of the University have drawn the fraternity chapters here into a close and harmonious union, represented by the Interfraternity Association. The fraternities at George Washington realize that fraternity life may be either the most narrowing or the most broadening life for a member during his college days and the Association seeks to promote a fraternalism that extends beyond the front door of a chapter house.

The Association enjoys the respect and confidence of the faculty and the University at large. It is looked to to organize and maintain all that is best for George Washington, and it has won this position because of its definite accomplishments since its establishment. The past year, with its confusion owing to the war and the disorganization of many lines of collegiate activity, has brought the Interfraternity Association into greater prominence and made it a still more potent factor in the University's life.

The social side of the Association's endeavors has been subordinated in order that all time and effort might be devoted to assisting the University in adjusting itself to war conditions. The annual Interfraternity Smoker, one of the biggest events of the University's social calendar for a number of years, was abandoned this year in the interests of war economy. A series of small, informal smokers was held, however, in order that the members of the chapters might become thoroughly acquainted.

The Pan-Hellenic Society, the inter-sorority organization of George Washington, aims to foster a better spirit among the sororities, to settle all matters of inter-sorority interest, and to coöperate with the school and school organizations in the University's welfare.

The first inter-sorority dance, a highly successful campaign to raise money for the Students' Friendship War Fund, and the annual Scholarship Luncheon, designed to foster high scholastic standing, are evidences of the Society's good work this year.

Sphinx

Prentiss, Sornborger, Walter.

The Sphinx Honor Society was organized in the fall of 1912, for the purpose of promoting high scholarship and interest in college activities among the women students of the University. The membership is limited to seven, proportioned among the three upper classes. Only those women students are elected to membership who have had a high scholastic record, have been unusually active in college affairs, are possessed of marked executive ability, and attain most nearly to the ideal of the womanhood of George Washington University.

Phi Delta Delta

(WOMEN'S LEGAL)

The Phi Delta Delta national legal fraternity for women has established a chapter at the George Washington University Law School to be known as the Zeta Chapter.

The charter members are:

JEANNETTE JEWELL '18
RUTH OSOINACH '18
LAURA VOLSTEAD '18
BESSIE NEWSOM '19
BERTHA PABST '19

The fraternity was founded in 1911 at the College of Law, University of Southern California, with the object of broadening the opportunities for women students of law and promoting their recognition in court practice.

High scholastic standing is the chief requisite for admission.

Since its organization the fraternity has grown rapidly, there being active chapters at the University of Oregon, the University of Washington, Chicago Kent School, and the New York University.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS?

(Excerpts from the catalog of Columbian College for the year 1847.)

The expenses were all right:

Winter Session.

Tuition.....	$26.00
Library, room, furniture, and bed.....	17.00
Table and servants, per week.....	2.25

But look at these rules:

It shall be the duty of every Student to attend respectfully at the appointed hours, the exercises of morning and evening prayers, and all other religious services directed by the President or the Faculty.

A Merit Book shall be kept by the Faculty, in which a record of the conduct of the students shall be preserved.

It shall be the duty of the Students to remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy; on which day they shall not go beyond the College premises, without previous permission from a member of the Faculty.

If any Student shall associate with vicious company, or a person suspended or expelled from the College; or shall play at dice, cards, billiards, backgammon, or any such games; or shall be guilty of contention, falsehood, intemperance, injustice, profaneness, immodesty, uncleanness, or any species of immorality, he shall be punished according to the aggravation of the offence.

No Student shall throw a stone, or any thing else, within one hundred yards of any building upon the College premises, under pain of severe reprehension.

No Student shall keep a servant; nor shall he keep fire-arms, or any deadly weapon whatever. He shall bring no gunpowder upon the College premises; nor shall horses, or dogs be kept by Students for their private use or pleasure.

No Student shall be absent from his room after nine o'clock at night, from the first of October to the first of March; nor after ten o'clock at night, during the remainder of the year, without being able to assign a satisfactory reason for the same.

No Student shall, at any time, smoke a pipe or cigar in any of the halls or public rooms of the College, nor in any bed-chamber, nor in or near any of the out-buildings on the College premises; nor shall any Student keep any ardent spirits, or intoxicating liquors of any kind, except when prescribed by a physician for medicine.

During term time, no Student shall visit the city or any neighboring town, nor go more than two miles from the College, without permission from a member of the Faculty.

And here is the course of study for the Freshman year:

Andrews and Stoddard's Latin, and Sophocles' Greek Grammars; Livy, Ovid, Xenophon's Anabasis, Homer's Iliad, Latin and Greek composition, Prosody, and Written Translations into English.

Algebra, Ancient Geography, History, Manual of Classical Literature or Smith's Greek and Roman Antiquities.

REVISED FOOTBALL CODE

(Adopted by the George Washington Team, 1918.)

Introductory—Considering the fact that football is a rough game;

That it has been shown that a number of players were severely thumped last season;

That it is a well-known fact that players have suffered callouses, corns, and other foot troubles as a consequence of other players treading impolitely upon their toes;

That it is a recognized truth that many wrist watches are demolished;

That players find it impossible to talk philosophy, discuss current events, conjugate verbs, and play at the same time;

That many players' hands and clothes are soiled in the contest;

And that it is impossible for both teams to win, thereby engendering naughty expletives and harsh words, it has been deemed wise and proper to establish these new rules.

Referee—The referee shall be a very elderly gentleman who shall be able to properly reprove the players in the Latin tongue.

Umpire—The umpire shall be a person who knows how to carry a cane and likewise to interject foreign phrases into his conversation (e. g., charmant, admirablement, etc.).

Linesman—The linesman shall be a person who has successfully passed the examination in knitting, and shall be able to knit speedily in order that he may call time.

Players—Every player must be a member of a Sunday School of recognized standing. When players come onto the field they shall exchange cards, hold a social chat for five minutes, and then embrace one another.

Precautions—Each player shall carry upon his person a vial of smelling salts to revive any comrade overcome by fatigue.

Protection—Each player shall be clothed in a long flowing robe so that there may be no vulgar exposure of the limbs. (Note: A very good model may be obtained in Nemo's History of the Romans, Ch. XXXVII: The Roman Fop.) Neither shall any player wear a corset, because of the danger of broken bones. Furthermore, corsets are unhealthful.

The Ball—The ball shall be a sofa pillow with the colors of the rival colleges interwoven. (Note: Nothing harder than down should be used as stuffing.)

Tackling—A legitimate tackle shall be as follows: When a player wishes to tackle he shall cry to the man with the ball, "Cease advancing or I shall use force." Should the player with the ball not obey, the tackler shall give him another warning. Should he fail to heed this, the tackler may tickle him with a straw, feather, or other such object. Should the player not laugh within five minutes his team shall gain five yards; if not within ten minutes his team shall gain ten yards, and so on. (Note: Should a player be forced to rest any part of his anatomy besides his feet on the ground a foul shall be called. This rule, it is felt, will impart the element of pure fun and eliminate that of personal assault.)

Profanity—The use of violent expletives, such as fudge, prunes, and the like, shall constitute a foul. Should any player commit such an indiscretion he shall immediately apologize and imprint a chaste salute upon the brow of the player insulted.

Time—The time it takes the linesman to knit eight rows of forty-eight stitches shall constitute a quarter.

Special Provisions—Should the grounds be damp or there be any danger of rain the contest shall be transferred to the chess-room and resumed there. This will increase the intellectual aspect of the game.

If too warm, the players may take walks about the field if properly chaperoned.

General receptions and teas shall be held between the quarters. This will increase the social aspect of the game.

Caution—Before the ball be put in play the referee shall see that the hands of each player are properly washed and manicured.

DON'T USE BIG WORDS

In promulgating your esoteric cogitations or articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amicable, philosophical and psychological observations, beware of platitudinous ponderosity. Let your conversational communications possess a clarified conciseness, compact comprehensibleness, coalescent consistency, and a concatenated cogency. Eschew all conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement and asinine affectations. Let your extemporaneous descantings and unpremeditated expatiations have intelligibility and veracious vivacity without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profundity, pompous prolixity, psittaceous vacuity, ventriloquil verbosity, and veniloquent vapidness. Shun double-entendres, prurient jocosity, pestiferous profanity, obscurent or apparent.

THE FRESHMAN-SOPHOMORE TUG-OF-WAR

The day of the annual Freshman-Sophomore tug-of-war was at hand. A few representatives of the two lower classes were out in battle array. Mighty deeds of valor and daring were in progress. The Freshies fought hard, determined that the glory of the day should fall to the lot of '21. The Sophies were equally valiant, and one of the number, Hero-boy, towered above all the others as a magnificent, mighty, menacing statue of dashing, dare-devil manhood. Like the good general that he was, he remained far in the rear, that he might better direct the movements of his men.

Hero-boy's cheek was blanched on that trying day of battle; but this was no sign of fear. Far from it. He remained in the rear as a reserve force. Should the Sophies be hard-pressed, it was his duty to retrieve the day. He was to be the "telling" factor in the day's combat.

The fight was on!

The line was dragged this way and that, then the Freshmen began to pull. Loudly did our Hero-boy exhort his teammates to pull. But alas, fruitless were his efforts. When it came his turn to be dubbed a Knight of the Bath, he, not caring to have the great honor dashed upon him, hurried through the spray. Yet, the unthinking marshals, little acquainted with the boy's modesty, cruelly "tapped" him with their batons and forced knighthood upon him.

A SOPHOMORE MED'S DREAM.

(With the usual apologies to Poe, God rest his soul!)

I.

Once upon a midnight dreary, as I pondered weak and weary
Over many a note book with backs well worn,
Suddenly there came a notion, which filled me with emotion,
Came a notion that our fate had on us dawned.
" 'Tis but fancy," then I muttered, as to the floor there fluttered
A MacCallum's Pathology all forlorn.

II.

What then was this wild feeling, that had set my brain a-reeling,
And made me think of lectures that during Fall term I had cut?
Surely this could bear inspection, may it not be some infection
That had spread and spread, and finally put my classmates in a rut?
I could see the germ quite clearly, and I tell you, friends, sincerely,
It was marked with "Loeffler's" name upon the "butt."

III.

Then my fear was most astounding, as I saw this germ surrounding
All my normal organs it could find.
Oh, to find some "anti-serum," with whose action I could queer 'em,
Or an "anti-toxic" substance of some kind.
Long I struggled with this theory, 'till I thought I should go leary,
When all at once there came a thought sublime.

IV.

For the good of the community, I established an "immunity,"
And I quarantined the "Prof" we love so well;
While in a sterilizer seated, all the quiz-masters I heated,
Until with mortal fear they all did yell.
Then before the Soph's quaking, in a thousand pieces breaking,
Down, the "side chain theory" of "Doc" Ehrlich fell.

V.

Then they banished all their sadness, and their hearts are filled with gladness,
As they saw how well had worked my little scheme.
Each exam was then forgotten, as they drank to joys begotten
By the workings of this clever little scheme.
But suddenly there came a ringing, as of Griffith loudly singing,
And I awoke.—After all, 'twas but a dream.

ADMISSION

All applicants for admission to the University must be either a man or woman. The former must be a genuine, bona fide amateur student; not particular about the latter.

Applicants must either take the regular examination or come provided with a letter of introduction.

Circulars giving the entrance requirements in detail can be secured from the managers of the various athletic teams.

HIGHER DEGREES

A. B.—Inducements are frequently offered to athletes to return and pursue graduate study in one of the three major branches, for which the degree of Bachelor of Athletics is awarded upon completion of satisfactory service.

M. D.—The Doctor of Mistakes degree is conferred upon all students who are successful in making more than five errors in their work during the two years of study required.

HONORARY DEGREES

In accordance with the custom already in vogue among the "Big Four," the University will, in the future, confer the usual honorary degrees upon certain open-hearted statesmen who, unfortunately, may not have enjoyed the advantages of a liberal college education. The degree will be in proportion to the munificence of the endowment.

EXAMINATIONS

At the opening of each athletic season a series of post-mortem examinations will be held for defunct athletes.

EXPENSES

Herewith is presented an estimate of expenses for students and others for the academic year:

	Tightwad. (Scholarship)	Liberal.	Sport.
Tuition .....		$150.00	$150.00
Room (including seat in chapel) .....	$23.50	150.00	500.00
Incidentals .....	50.00	100.00	300.00
Books .....	30.45	15.00	.....
Cider .....	.15	.....	.....
Other beverages (not including fares to Baltimore) .....		56.00	268.00
Railroad fares .....		8.40	40.00
Theater .....		40.00	120.00
Suppers .....		30.00	150.00
Church contributions .....		5.00	.....
Athletics .....		10.00	50.00

SELF-AID

The Y. M. C. A. has positions for able-bodied students. Students who have friends who know or have heard of a Congressman are very fortunate, and should experience no difficulty whatever in securing a position. No work goes with these positions, however. Students who have domestic inclinations and desire to work can earn a fair income by doing sewing or taking in washing. Union wages are paid in each instance.

FINANCIAL AID TO NEEDY STUDENTS

The University has set aside a fund to aid students who cannot otherwise enjoy the things so requisite to a liberal education, such as theaters, flowers, cabs, dances, wines, and races.

PUBLICATIONS

The weakly paper upholds the intellectual life at the University. It is the policy of the paper not only to reflect but to direct public opinion. Pret T. Badd moulded public opinion for us last year. Needless to say, it will be even mouldier this year under his able successor, Littel Wurse.

LIBRARIES

The University Library, for the use of a select number of young ladies and gentlemen of the University, offers a number of delightfully cozy alcoves in which the lights are beautifully modulated. There are several snug retreats for those desirous of exchanging heart to heart dissertations.

THE SAMUEL BIER COLLECTION

The Samuel Bier collection of books, pamphlets and articles on prohibition is absolutely the dryest reading in the country. Only fanatics and tightwad students are allowed access to the collection.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Libraries and class rooms are closed on Saturday afternoons as soon as the pleasure resorts near the city open in the spring.

All class work in the University is suspended when the bells are rung.

Lucky Strike and U. S. Marine are the only brands of tobacco which have the sanction of the head of the English Department.

When called to the Dean's office on matters of discipline students should not smoke. Your tobacco may be disagreeable to the other occupant of the room.

Lass Day is the day before Commencement. Glass Night is the same night. At 10 A. M. the following day the annual distribution of cracked ice takes place.

IN THE DISSECTING ROOM

DEDICATION:

To CLARA C. BARCLAY

Whose great interest in the ways and habits of medical students at G. W. has done so much for the medical profession, is this little poem lovingly dedicated.

I.

Lots of lungs and livers,
Heaps of heads and hearts,
Decaying human members
In several sundry parts.
Heavens! let me quickly
Give my cigar a whiff!
Bless me, this is pleasant,
Slicing up a stiff!
Dissecting room in college
Eighteen flights of stairs,
Sixty fiendish medics
Working all in pairs.
Oversleeves and apron,
Carbolic acid, grease,
Little knives and tweezers,
A pipe or so apiece.

II.

Now everything is ready,
Fun will soon begin;
Here on the slab before us
Lies what a maid has been.
But she's no longer pretty—
Her teeth have fallen out,
Leaving thus the matter of
Her age somewhat in doubt.
Her face has lost the freshness
Of maidenhood and youth;
Her skin is not quite "pearly,"
To tell the "naked" truth.
Her form is not exactly
What might be called divine,
And to raptures o'er her bosom
No poet would incline.
Now our gaze is fastened
Upon her skullless head,
And we are moved to wonder
How long she has been dead.

III.

Now a blooming "medic"
With shiny knife and hook,
Commences, while another
Reads to him from a book.
Cuts the Epidermis,
Takes a careful look.
Another medic quickly
Names it from a book.

Slices up a muscle,
 Fishes out a vein,
 Finds a piece of tendon,
 Applies a Latin name.
 Lignum vitæ major,
 Tyrannis Semper sic,
 Non compos mentis minor,
 Habeas corpus hic,
 Prehensile os femoris,
 Posterior conjunct,
 Ab livitum superbus,
 Anterior defunct.

IV.

Surely no right-minded mortal
 Would ever dare surmise
 He'd have so much of Latin
 Left in him when he dies.
 No wonder that the maiden
 Made up her mind to die.
 If I thought I had all those things,
 Great Caesar! So would I.
 'Tis well the soul's immortal
 And leaves this house of clay,
 For wouldn't it be pleasant
 To hear some medic say,
 As he takes a pair of forceps
 And holds it up to view:
 "We may observe quite plainly
 The soul is split in two;
 Our friend here who possessed it
 Was a mugwump, we can bet,
 Or perhaps was fond of smoking
 A cubeb cigarette."

V.

No, some few things are sacred
 From investigation's gaze;
 They may slice and slash our carcass,
 But our soul they cannot phase.
 Oh, bless the blooming medics,
 They will cure us of our ills,
 They'll fill us full of physic,
 They'll fill us full of pills;
 They'll saw our little legs off,
 They'll bandage up our head;
 They'll cure us while we're living,
 They'll carve us when we're read.

L'Envoi.

Lots of lungs and livers,
 Heaps of heads and hearts,
 Decaying human members,
 In several sundry parts.
 Heavens let me quickly
 Give my cigar a whiff!
 Bless me, this is pleasant,
 Slicing up a stiff.

LOOK! LOOK! LOOK!

By an especial graft the editors of the Cherry Tree have been able to obtain copies of some of the exams which will be given as finals this year, weather conditions permitting.

MEDIAEVAL HISTORY

(Answer ten from each group. Time allowed, two hours.)

I

1. Who was Alexis of Russia and what effect did he have on Billy Sunday? 2. What relation was Richard III to St. Peter? 3. What made the Papal tiara burn like fire?

II

1. Write all you know about Urban II. 2. Do you know any more about Urban II? 3. If so, write two pages on Martin Luther. 4. What effect did Henry II have on Lothair? If you do not know what country he was king of, answer the question anyway.

III

1. Who was Louis V of France? 2. What kingdom was Louis V Emperor of? 3. Was he an Emperor, anyway? 4. Was Julius Caesar any relation to Karl Martel?

Editor's Note—There are a lot more questions, but you couldn't answer them anyway, so we will not print them. If you want them, come to the office.

ENGLISH RHETORIC

(Two hours. Answer any seven.)

1. Quote and explain.
2. Define the whyness of thus with regard to rhetoric and give examples.
3. Why is rhetoric a fine art? Give reasons.
4. Give your opinion of "Deep Sea Cables." If it is not that kind of an opinion, give it anyway.
5. Write on your style with suggestions for its improvement. If you cannot think of any way to improve it, we can.
6. Write on the Monograph, Diana of the Tides, or any other theme you copied during the year from some '16-'17 theme.
7. Sign the pledge.

THIS SOLDIER HAD SEEN AN UNUSUAL AMOUNT OF ACTIVE SERVICE

CONFESSIONS OF PROF. CROISSANT, OR WHY I AM POPULAR

(Edited by the members of his English classes.)

- A. How I fill the seats.
  1. Pretend it's a pipe course.
  2. Allow the impression to spread that I am a philosophical anarchist.
  3. Read the Christian Science Monitor.
  4. Cultivate a shady past.
  5. Tell how I got fired in 1910.
- B. How I win the love of my class.
  1. Never call in outside reading.
  2. Always answer my own questions.
  3. Condemn college faculties on general principles.
  4. Omit examinations and quizzes.
  5. Act surprised when I pull a "new" one.
- C. Where I get my jokes.
  1. Last year's classes.
  2. My wife.
  3. Dorothy.
  4. Hatchet, Cherry Tree (from the year of ONE inclusive).
  5. Rev. William Sunday.
- D. How I grade my students.
  1. Never raise high marks.
  2. How I lower low marks:
    - (a) Multiply the attitude of said student by 23, add 13, add to 99, divide by 6, and subtract the result from the weighted average, allowing for the atmospheric pressure that pervades the recitation.
    - (b) Deduct  $2\frac{3}{4}$  per cent from the whole class whenever:
      - (1) Anyone goes to sleep.
      - (2) Laughter is not forthcoming when I spring an old one for the  $n$ th time.
      - (3) Someone calls me "Prof."
      - (4) Anyone asks an embarrassing question or otherwise shows signs of reasoning.
- E. How I make it pay.
  1. Flunk half the class and tutor them.
  2. Write articles for "Every Week."
  3. Sears, Roebuck & Co.
  4. Annual editions on "The Justification of the Existence of the Student Council."
  5. Half time at Castelberg's.
- F. The goals of my ambition.
  1. To grow old and crabby.
  2. To have a funny story for my English classes.
  3. To cultivate a distinguished appearance.
  4. To give up my old pipe and get back to cigarettes again.

THE Merchants whose advertisements appear in the following pages represent the class of people with whom it pays to deal. They have done their share in making this book possible; they have lent us their co-operation financially; play fair—lend them yours by dealing with them. In doing so you will help the University fulfill its obligations, and also be sure of the best that the market affords at fair prices.

The Editor's Thanks

Before completing his work the editor must express a few words of appreciation and thanks to those who have assisted in making this book.

To the entire Cherry Tree Board words of appreciation are due. The staff has worked hard and faithfully to make the book a success. Many not on the staff have kindly offered their assistance and in a number of cases the offers were gratefully accepted.

Laurence E. Burton, editor of the 1917 Cherry Tree, gave many suggestions and answered many questions. The editor is greatly indebted to him for his help.

Professor Croissant and other members of the faculty assisted in the endeavor to have all material accurate. They are to be thanked for their careful supervision.

For the art work Miss Phebe Gates' staff, consisting of John D. Cobb, Clarence A. Smith, and Misses Marian Crist, Iris Beatty, and Rebecca Herzmark, deserve many thanks.

Thanks to a large body of students and personal friends whose interest and co-operation the editor has sincerely appreciated.

With this the book is finished—and we are through.
